LOSS OF $15,000,000 IN FIRE BELIEVED STARTED BY THE BRITISH POLICE

BUSIEST PARTS OF CITY TODAY PILES OF BLACKENED RUIN

(International News Service.)

From sporadic attacks and outbreaks, Ireland within the past 45 hours has been plunged into a change, more closely approximating actual warfare than in any time in the history of Ireland.

Irish Republicans attacked British troops occupying Camlough Barracks in North Ireland, where it is reported many have been killed in violent battle. Reinforcements being rushed to Camlough Barracks were ambushed at the railway viaduct near Newry, where another battle took place. A military lorry was bombed outside of Cork, 14 Black and Tans being wounded. The partial destruction of Cork was a severe blow to the Republicans. Cork is the hotbed of the Sinn Feiners.

All South Ireland is crammed with British troops and measures are being taken to tighten and extend martial law. British troops attacked bombers at Cloyne, County of Cork, killing and wounding two, and capturing two, following bomb throwing at the military patrol from two houses which later were burned to the ground.

A woman looter is reported to have been shot and killed in the firewept area of Cork. A constable was killed and three others wounded in an ambush near Liske, County of Langford.

Fire Not Under Control.
(International News Service.)

LONDON, Dec. 13—Fire sweeping the heart of Cork was not yet under complete control at noon today and is threatening to spread according to dispatches to the Globe. In the face of apparently conclusive evidence to the contrary, the Irish office today denied that the Black and Tans and British troops were responsible for the conflagration.

Many streets in the busiest parts of Cork are today piles of blackened ruins. Four blocks were completely wiped out, only the walls of the city hall remaining.

It is reported that a number of lives were lost but it is impossible to confirm this report. Civilians, in panic are leaving by the thousand. Troops are guarding the fire-swept district while firemen are at work.

The loss is now estimated at $15,000,000. Martial law continued today. Over one hundred buildings were destroyed or badly damaged. Many arrests were made.

Cork Continues to Burn.
(United Press.)

CORK, Dec. 13—Cork continued to burn today, the fire spread over a quarter of a mile of the main business section of the city. Incendiary fires started Saturday night swallowed up more property last night and early today. The losses, it is estimated, will approach $15,000,000.

Two thousand persons are put out of work, with banking houses, shops and the city hall destroyed. It is believed there are some casualties, but smoking ruins permitted no search for bodies today. Opinion disagreed whether the fire was started by the British police in reprisal for ambush. Fire fighters from Dublin and Limerick arrived to relieve the wearied Cork firemen.

Inquiry Begins.
(United Press.)

LONDON, Dec. 13—A government inquiry of the Cork conflagration began today. No reports have been received by the Irish office as to casualties. The responsibility for the fire is not known here, in view of conflicting reports.

British Regular Stand Guard.
(International News Service.)

LONDON, Dec. 13—British regulars stand guard over blackened ruins left by fires which swept through Cork, Ireland Sunday. Charges are made that police auxiliaries, maddened by the killing of comrades by ambushed Sinn Feiners loosed the fire demon on the city with a loss estimated at $15,000,000. The terrorized districts are now quiet, with the military ordered to shoot looters on sight.

Root is again mentioned for the state secretaryship in Harding's cabinet.

Suggests Sweeping Changes
(International News Service.)

MARION, Dec. 13—Elihu Root today brought his conclusions as to world conditions, gathered at first hand from dominating minds in Europe, to President-Elect Harding. It is understood that Root advocated the present League of Nations with certain sweeping changes as ground work for American and foreign relationship, dealing almost entirely with legal, diplomatic and political angles of the situation.

President-Elect Harding and W. J. Bryan Invited to Speak at Rural Conference Here January 20-24

Most Probable That Harding Will Accept

An effort is being made by men prominent in the educational affairs of the nation, to secure the attendance of President-Elect Warren G. Harding and Hon. William J. Bryan to attend the National Rural Educational Conference to be held here at the Auditorium from January 20th to 24th inclusive. This national intellectual feast will be given under the auspices of the National Bureau of Education in Washington and the plans are under the direction of Hon. J. L. McBrien of that department who is the specialist in rural education.

Yesterday R. S. Holmes received the following self-explaining letter from Mr. McBrien:

Hon. R. S. Holmes
President Community Forum,
Daytona Beach, Florida.
My Dear Mr. Holmes:—

I am just in receipt of a good letter from Supt. Sheppard. He will do all he can to make the Better School parade a great success. He also suggests that we invite President-elect Harding. I shall invite Mr. Harding soon, inviting him to take part on our program. Please have your governor and governor-elect, and your delegation in congress, including senators and representatives, write Mr. Harding also. Please give me the name and address of your governor-elect. When will he assume the duties of his office?

I have just written an invitation of Mr. Bryan to take part on our conference program. I wish you would write him a good letter of invitation also. With best wishes, believe me.

Sincerely yours,
(signed) J. L. McBRIEN.

Mr. McBrien also enclosed to Mr. Holmes a copy of the following letter which he wrote and sent to Mr. Harding.

Washington, Dec. 9, 1920.

My Dear Mr. President-elect:—

Knowing your great interest in the cause of public education and learning from the press dispatches that you contemplate a visit to the south on or about January 15, 1921, it gives me pleasure to extend to you an earnest and cordial invitation to take part on the program of the Federal and Interstate Citizenship conference on Education to be held at Daytona Beach, Florida, January 20-24 1921, both inclusive. While the conference is in the main for the states of Florida, Georgia, South Carolina and the neighboring states of the South Atlantic division we shall have thousands of people in attendance from New England and other northern states who will be spending their winter vacation at Daytona Beach at the time of our conference. Several sessions of our conference will have an attendance of 2500 to 3000 people with representatives from twenty-five to thirty states present. Daytona Beach has a fine new auditorium with a standing capacity of 3500. In the event of your coming, the weather permitting, we would need to have an open meeting for an audience of at least 10,000 people.

On Friday, January 21, we shall have a "Better School" parade when teachers, pupils and citizens from the entire local county and neighboring counties will be in attendance. If you can give us a date for Daytona, we shall make this parade on the date of your visit there.

To give you a better idea of what the United States Bureau of Education is trying to do in its nation-wide campaign for better schools, I am enclosing a program of one of our former conferences. During the past five years over thirty conferences have been held covering the entire country thereby. They have unified educational thought and effort for better schools throughout the nation.

If there ever was a time when education was the "Chief defence of nations", as Edmund Burke thought it was, that time is now. If there ever was a time when education was a "better safeguard of liberty than a standing army," as Edward Everett declared it to be, that time is now. If there ever was a time when education was "the foundation, the main enduring stone of the temple of liberty, our surest stay in every storm, our present safety, our future hope, aye, the very citadel of our influence and power, better than garrisons and guns, than forts and fleets," as William McKinley believed it to be, when he was governor of Ohio, it has all of these values now.

Your life, character, career and the high position to which the people have called you will make an address from you in behalf of education at this time more valuable and far-reaching in its influence than that of any living man in behalf thereof, of the great cause of education and the matchless service you can render the cause at this time. I am hoping your plans for a visit to the south will make it possible for you to deliver an address on our program at Daytona Beach, Fla. Your date will be our date, your subject our subject.

With best wishes for the success of your administration and the peace and prosperity of our country, believe me,

Very sincerely yours,
(Signed) J. L. McBRIEN,
Director Rural School Extension

As Mrs. Harding's mother, Mrs. A. H. Kling, is already at Daytona, and as he has many friends hereabouts, having been here several times, it is believed not to be improbable that he will make an effort to make a visit at the time the National Bureau of Education desires to have him come. If they come, both Senator Harding and Mr. Bryan will be given important places on the program of the conference.

CHINESE EGGS

"The average Chinese hen averages 3—count 'em—eggs a year," a radio boss lingerie, China.

And Americans talk as if danger of losing their eggs robbed all us chaps of our quota of American hens. China's "100" million hens lay only one-fifth as many eggs as the United States hens do—and yet China has more hens, more roosters, more chicks, more everything, and visitors generally.

It might make a good doctor and he multiple and prune enough to end such a country as the rotten system with a border bullock, as the Chinese eggs do—by infection and similar bodies.

Finally have philosophers will wonder why the Chinese do not export their eggs without breaking them, and never have been competitors for our farmers' products. Well, there are reasons—reasons that eggs in the shell WILL rot easily in ocean shipment and that it would be a disheartening problem if, say 150,000,000 eggs per breeze, at the hold of a steamer Pacific navigator.

But then is just the Chinaman's style. The real reason for shipping eggs "in the knock-down" is that Chinese eggs are worth more than those from American hens and would not appeal to Americans, particularly those who often ponder if it wouldn't be better to eat eggs by weight.

The Angelino has two the true American spirit and here the big eggs. No wonder she carries so load-ly.

GROWING CLOSER

The world, day by day, is growing smaller, which makes nothing more than the people of the world are getting nearer each other. When the cruiser commissioner of all the allied countries met in Paris and perfected an international body, they had admitted that the men who stood shoulder to shoulder in the trenches would wish to stand by, apart in peace.

Their suggestion that all the allied countries honor that tich as the international memorial day, an hour when the world pauses in its labors and its pleasures to honor who gave their all, the "International Armistice Day" is to be supported as a fruit of the international war. It gives promise of saying the way for a World Memorial Day. Why not? Why not soon?

You never get closer to a fellow human being than while you stand by his grave at the grave of one you both love and honor.

BETTER USE FOR IT

[illegible] days years then $24,000,000 passed through the betting machines at the one big Cleveland race-track.

While the wheels were running turnstiles were tapping backs for admission of boobs, and bookmakers in cities were crying for additional capital, but the money kept on coming and the bosses kept on betting.

The confounding fact has plenty of ready money for the race-track and table for the fool and lottery in one which might be improved, don't you think? Surely there is a better use for currency than passing it through betting machines.

Other stock opinions today are:

Shonnard Mills: "While further readjustment remains and as usual, it is likely to produce painful results, we believe that the time is at hand to take a hopeful and constructive view. We are nearing a period of easier money and many securities are on a basis where the return makes their purchase profitable."

McLave and Co. In the past it has always proven that in times of depressed business and sentiment, stocks have passed into the hands of strong cool headed capitalists and remain in their possession until a much later time when wild enthusiasm and universal optimism have resulted from business improvement. We believe this is what is happening now."

Thomson & McKinnon's stock letter today says: "Just as the foundation is laid for a great banking corporation to develop export business, Congress is preparing to pass a bill prohibiting immigration for two years. It is unfortunate for the companies like International Mercantile Marine, who need right now every dollar of revenue that could be obtained. I see nothing in the situation this morning that would indicate any change in our market. There are a sufficient number of shorts in the market to give us a good rally again at any moment. For that reason I think a real recovery is still some distance off."

CHINESE EGGS

The steamer Tacoma Star arrives [in] New York with a cargo of 138,000,000 eggs from Hankow, China.

But housewives are in no danger of having these eggs palmed off on them as the product of American hens. Chinese eggs are broken before being exported. They are then frozen into a solid mass, sometimes scrambled, often with the yolks and whites separate.

It would drive a retail dealer mad to explain and argue enough to sell such a product to the canny woman with a market basket, so the Chinese eggs go to bakeries and similar trades.

Family lamp philosophers will wonder why the Chinese do not export their eggs without breaking them, and enter into keen competition for our household patronage. The Chinese exporter explains that eggs in the shell break very easily in ocean shipment and that it would be a distressing problem if, say 138,000,000 eggs got broken in the hold of a trans-Pacific freighter.

But that is just the Chinaman's alibi. The real reason for shipping eggs "in the knock-down" is that Chinese eggs are much smaller than those from American fowl and would not appeal to housewives, particularly those who often wonder if it wouldn't be fairer to sell eggs by weight.

The American hen has the true American spirit and lays the big eggs. No wonder she cackles so loudly.

GROWING CLOSER

The world, day by day, is growing smaller, which means nothing more than the people of the world are getting nearer each other. When the veteran organizations of all the allied countries met in Paris and perfected an international body, they but admitted that the men who stood shoulder to shoulder in the trenches have no wish to stand far apart in peace.

Their suggestion that all the allied countries honor May 30th as the interallied memorial day, an hour when the world pauses in its living to pay tribute to those who once lived. An "interallied Memorial Day" is to be expected as a fruit of the interallied war. It gives promise of paving the way for a World Memorial Day. Why not? Why not soon?

You never get closer to a fellow human being than when you stand by his side at the grave of one you both loved and honor.

BETTER USE FOR IT

In 110 days more than $50,000,000 passed through the betting machines of the four big Maryland race-tracks.

While the ponies were running farmers were begging banks for extension of loans, and business men in cities were crying for additional capital, but the ponies kept on running and the betters kept on betting.

The civilization that has plenty of ready money for the race-track and little for the field and factory is one which might be improved, don't you think? Surely there is a better use for currency than passing it through betting machines.

Many Delightful Scenes About Daytona Beach as Background for Pictures, Says Movie Man

For the past few days Frank Louis Grandy of Norfolk, Va., has been one of the easy mannered and strikingly entertaining guests at the Seaside Inn. He is a young man of culture and refinement and has every appearance of being broadly, generously educated. His uncle, now dead, was Albert Grandy, founder and for years editor and publisher of the Virginian Pilot of Norfolk and prominent as a member of one of the distinguished families of Virginia.

Before the war Mr. Grandy was the manager of the Royal Hawaiian Opera house in Hawaii and interested in the moving picture business generally in that country. He was severely wounded at the battle of Chauteau Thierry and has been paying some attention to the regaining of his health and strength. He is much improved and very recently has been giving some attention to the selection of some appropriate location for taking some traveliogue and travelstory pictures. He is interested in Florida and the West Indies, and for his purposes he has been carefully surveying the natural beauty and other attractions about here for motion pictures. Mr. Grandy is much pleased with the opportunity he finds here for his interesting work. He has had considerable journalistic experience and when in business has always looked after the publicity end.

When asked if he considered that Daytona Beach was a good place for making motion pictures, Mr. Grandy replied:

"Well, that depends on the type of the picture. In order to answer that point to your satisfaction, I will first have to explain a little about the requirements of the motion picture producers.

"Broadly speaking, exterior settings for the pictures are divided into two classes:

"First, those scenes that are typical of the nation in general, and,

"Second, those that are fascinating or different from those that are typical.

"For example, a dusty road running past a village postoffice, which has an oak tree by its side and rolling hills in the distance is typical of most all parts of the country; on the other hand, one of your Indian river roads, with the hibiscus bushes by its side and the palms hanging overhead, is what I mean by fascinating and different.

"As a rule, the typical settings are used for realistic pictures, and the fascinating and different ones for the romantic stories. While the Florida scenes are not typical, they are so delightfully different that they should be wonderfully attractive throughout the country as a whole. Anyway, people like to see a movie that shows something different from what they see in their everyday life; for instance, in the eastern cities they love the pictures that deal with the wild out-in-the-open west, whereas, the cow punchers and their lassies of the plains have a decided preference for stories that deal with scandals in high society.

"People are tiring of the so-called realistic pictures for several reasons. In the first place the movies have no great and popular writers of the type of the late O'Henry, a genius who had a sort of X-ray vision for locating stories of poetic beauty beneath all the dirt and dinginess of New York City's side streets. Then, the audiences have been disgusted with those pictures that claim to be a faithful reproduction of some phase of American life but in reality show such evident absurdities as the millionaire who offers his guests a pool of champagne to drink from, or the society queen who has a squad of maids prepare for her a bath of Persian Rose Cologne—lest one drop of common water might spoil her complexion. Moreover, there is also the commonplace fake realistic picture that has an irritating way of reminding us of the petty problems we have had to face during the day. Now, when we go out to the theatre at night we want to forget all the troubles that have fretted us during the day. In fact, when we go to the show at night most of us still have the same taste that we had when we were little children and used to like to cuddle up and hear the wonderful romances of Prince Charmings, pirates or fairies, just before we went to sleep at night.

"Florida is a wonderful place for making these romantic pictures. We all know that a majority of the best American romantic movies have had southern settings. The southern settings are best for romantic stories. As a matter of fact, there is a certain fusion of warmth and wild beauty in this romantic scenery that any real artist can make suggestive of certain moods and passions, whereas, the colder temper of northern scenes are far less expressive.

"The one state of Virginia has furnished good material for over 100 good plays and great novels; therefore, I feel sure that the one state of Florida, with all of its romantic past history and fascinating present day life; its different styles of Spanish, old southern and modern architecture and all of the radiant glories of its tropic shores, endless marshes, stretching beaches, mysterious jungles, unlimited wealth of foliage and its rivers that wend their way through vision of unexpected loveliness, can furnish the material for hundreds of entrancing moving pictures.

"In the past there have been some great novelists who used Florida for a locale. Just a few years ago, Robert W. Chambers, who writes the sensational society stories, used Palm Beach for a locale; however, I would rate Mr. Chambers as a great scandalist rather than as a great novelist.

"Why, a whole lot of good pictures could be taken right here along the Halifax. Authors long ago found out the great value of rivers for story settings. Did you ever notice how a river wends its way through so many different kinds of places and phases of life? For instance, your own beautiful river flows along past busy towns and mysterious jungles, darky huts and handsome villas, hustling wharf scenes and dreamy tropical gardens. Even a vampire story could be filmed along a river, for we all know that Cleopatra, the original pioneer in the vampire industry, used to hang out on the Nile. I surely would like to see a vamp picture made on one of these Florida rivers, because I've high hopes that some lively old alligator would consume the devilish female, thereby giving the movie audiences one less vampire to contend with. But I reckon in that case the poor alligator would be vamped from within and doubtless he would then start out on a roughish trip across the Everglades to teach all of the other 'gators how to commit an endless line of passionable scandals. Maybe Mr. Alligator would ever journey down to Miami and show W. J. B. a thing or two.

"Well, to go from the ridiculous to the sublime, I want to say that there are some rarely beautiful places around Daytona Beach that are very suitable for motion picture settings. Among them, the unrivaled beach, the residential street scenes, some of the hotel exteriors and the numerous pleasant spots along the river side. Then many of your lovely villas are surrounded by sub-tropical gardens, with their moss laden trees, give an unusual effect of wistful beauty. For example, I mean some of the houses in the residential section of Daytona and that palace of a 'King' on the Peninsula drive."

Mr. Grandy expects to be here for about another week, when he intends to make a visit to Eden, Fla., where he has an old newspaper friend. Local people need not be surprised if some time in the near future they will see on the screens a delightful and faithful story of nearby Florida life—one from the hand of this welcome guest.

SUCCESSFUL RAISER OF BLACK FOX AT THE BEACH

When at his northern home in Muskegon, Mich., William H. Smith, who has spent several winters at Daytona Beach and who with Mrs. Smith is located in the Weona cottage at 225 Coates street for the coming season, is at the head of one of the most unusual, unique and yet one of the most prosperous business enterprises in the country.

Mr. Smith is at the head of the Michigan Silver Black Fox company, and is the original pioneer in this country in the business of raising fox for sale. After five years of experience he now pronounces it the best paying kind of live stock production in the world.

This sort of enterprise originated in Prince Edwards island a number of years ago and in 1915, or a little more than five years ago, Mr. Smith made a trip to that country, and after visiting and investigating the largest ranches of the kind in the world he purchased four pairs of these fox for $20,000 and took them with him to his home in Muskegon, making up his mind to actively engage in the enterprise. He keeps them separated in pairs, keeping one pair in each pen of 24x30 feet in size. He now has 96 of these pens, which he says is as large a ranch as he desires, as this number is all that his son and two caretakers can properly feed and handle.

During the five years Mr. Smith has been in this business he has had as many as 324 foxes at one time. Last year he succeeded in raising 178 young ones.

When a young man Mr. Smith engaged somewhat in trapping, and in this way became interested in the fur business.

Mr. Smith, who is very popular on the Daytona Beach playground and among the beach fishing circles, is a mighty healthy example of a retired business man, enjoying life to the very utmost. He is optimistic by nature, is brimful of good cheer and has a broad vision of the world. He is courteous and considerate and appears anxious that every other man shall have as good a chance in the world as himself. Although both he and Mrs. Smith have visited several other winter resorts they insist there are many good reasons why Daytona Beach is the best of all.

Shakertown, where her hotel is located, is a deserted village of the once famous Shaker colony. It is surrounded by beautiful scenery and is near the cliffs of the Kentucky mountains and just up the river are the locks and famous oil fields.

Interesting Services at the Auditorium Sunday P. M. by Evangelist John Fulton Party

Evangelist John Fulton, former New York City saloonkeeper, and hotel keeper who turned his back upon $50,000 worth of property to enter the ministry, addressed a large audience at the Auditorium Sunday afternoon.

Director James Heaton of the Florida Forum and Assembly sang several solos. Mrs. Fulton, wife of the evangelist, also rendered several selections.

In relating his experiences the evangelist said:

"Tuesday evening, April 14, 1908, at Altoona, Pa. will long be remembered by the great audience that packed the tabernacle and tested its capacity to the utmost.

It was during the great Davis and Mills campaign in which 32 associate churches were united and the city was stirred to its utmost by the power of God.

John Fulton the converted saloonkeeper of Brooklyn, N. Y., was to tell his life story. The great choir of nearly 400 voices sang the hymns with much spirit and enthusiasm. Messrs. Mills and Pike sang sweetly the duet "Drifting Away From God." The great choir and congregation sang "Oh What a Change" until it seemed that the very roof would be lifted, and then when the choir antiphonically responded so intense was the appreciation that the audience burst out in spontaneous applause. The silence of expectation was profound as Mr. Fulton stepped in front of the great audience and asked all to bow in prayer. It was a prayer from the heart, a child's prayer to his father for help and power to tell the story of a life that it might benefit others. Mr. Fulton said:

While I sat there listening to the grand singing of "Oh What a Change" I could not help but say "Amen." Thirteen months ago I used to be dealing out the stuff that drove men mad and now tonight I am here pointing men to the "Lamb of God", the great remedy for 'em and dear friends I am awfully glad of it. This afternoon I was very tired and praise God, I am getting rest from trying to picture the time when I would be home in Father's house and there would be no more dieing and no more crying and all tears would be washed away from our eyes and we will behold Him and not another and while I try to tell you this marvelous story, I ask that you will pray to God to help me, for each time I tell it, it seems more wonderful to me.

I attribute the vision or voice that I heard that night as God's answer to my dear old mother's prayer.

Twenty-five years ago I came to this country an innocent boy, and they called me "Milk Sop" because I wouldn't drink. After a time I started in the saloon business in a little hole in the wall at 18th street and Third avenue Brooklyn. My highest ambition was to own a large hotel and drive fast horses and wear big diamonds, which stage I had arrived at and felt like say as with the rich men of old "Soul take thine ease, eat drink and be merry." When the Lord called on me to stop and think before going farther. In going to bed after drinking champagne [illegible] hours. I could not get to sleep for the rehearsing of the passage through my mind of Proverbs 29:1, "He that being often reproved hardeneth his neck, shall be suddenly destroyed and that without remedy." On hearing this verse quoted a number of times and not knowing where the passage [illegible] written or whether it was Scripture or not. I know it was the voice of God. The awful disease of sin had eaten so far into my life that I had lost all remembrance of [illegible] and school boy days. I thought the fulfillment of the latter part of the verse about to be performed and me to go into the [illegible] unprepared [illegible] bush in the way to stop me from going straight to hell if I had of died that night. Remembering the solemn pledge I had made some three and a half years before to my wife the morning she departed this life, on my knees at her bedside I pledged myself to her to give up the business and bring my family up in a different business and live a clean life. Men, when I stood by her bedside and made the promise I truly meant it, if any man ever did, and tried to keep it but in vain, because I tried to keep it in my own strength. You know, men, we often make promises and do our best. I am sure some of you have done the same thing and the same reason you have failed is the same one that I failed in, by myself. Remembering that Christ says, "Without me ye can do nothing." That is why I couldn't keep mine, I didn't have His help. When I heard his voice "He that being often reproved shall be suddenly destroyed, and that without remedy." Then came to my mind the words, "The harvest is past, the summer is ended, and I am not saved."

And with awful agony of soul I wept and cried to God to give me one more chance. All the prayer I prayed was that if God would let me live to see the light of another day, my life should count, and after getting into bed I was scared to go to sleep for fear I would die before morning. I then got out of bed again and begged the Lord to spare me as a guardian over my orphan children. While on my knees the plan of salvation appeared as clearly as I have ever heard it since. …at the time, while … stays home alone, … father or mother … and I might as well have been … as a companion as where … father should count. I … provided well for my family as far as money was concerned and God … me. I thought that was all, but when God's great X-ray was turned on me, it revealed me with awful bitterness the sad, fruitless past. But on getting down stairs this morning, it had been my custom for years every morning to drink a cocktail and sometimes more than one. This morning when I got down my manager, Al, gave me the usual sign with his fingers which meant to mix one for me, I shook my head and said "No, not today." Getting past the first wicked gate I went to my home to eat breakfast. On my arrival there my dear little girl that had got so near to my life and grew to be so like her mother, looking into my face asked me what was the matter with my eyes—if I had slept well last night. I said, "No, the Lord wonderfully dealt with my soul in bed last night". This I said unconsciously. Since I have been converted and been acquainted with God's word somewhat, for there we read, "He shall put a

… to the hotel with the intention of … it up and going out of … business, but men, do you know the devil is playing a losing game, he is always willing to compromise? He said, to me, "Don't you be a fool, John, to give up your good business that took you so many years and so many sleepless night to build up. You just go out and run a nice respectable hotel. You can do that. You remember Bishop Potter, he used to run a saloon in New York and had no experience. You know the business so thoroughly have got him beat forty ways." I immediately fell in with the idea and thought it was a good on. I went to work that morning with the intention of running a first class Christian saloon. Don't laugh, men, it might sound funny, but I thought if a man like Bishop Potter could run a respectable Christian saloon, it was perfectly ligitimate for me to do it, and I started off that morning after making a number of changes to run a thoroughly respectable, legitimate, up-to-date Christian saloon. This running a legitimate place went on for about ten days. Having observed that the definition of the word Christian meant to be Christlike, I thought it was a very high standard. Would to God that I could see every morning I live with such tremendous force as I did that morning, what it meant to live a Christian life. In those ten days I had many little fall downs, things that the world would not take notice of because I had not made any out-

… almost broke my heart … believed then that if I had not yielded to God's terms that he would have taken me off the earth. Now, how I came to go out of the business altogether was through a customer of mine. After paying him a bill he went out to the bar. He asked me, which was the usual custom, to have a drink, and I said no, that I was on the water wagon to stay, and the cursed stuff was no good anyhow and any man who drunk it was a fool even if I sold it. He looked at me and smiled, after which he gave me the names of several good doctors saying I should see and then he started in and told me a funny story, which had been his custom. I listened with much interest and got carried away for a few minutes and when he got through I was just about to tell him one in return. I had everything done but sound the word, when the still small voice came to me and said, "Would Jesus do this?" While I had nothing to apologize for, yet I felt condemned inasmuch as I said, "Excuse me" and walked off and left him. When getting into the office I opened my writing desk which contained a little testament that I had received the Thanksgiving day before my conversion from

… While on my knees I said, "Lord show me what is in the way and I am satisfied to give it up." Not thinking he was going to hit me so hard as to ask me to come out from business and getting off my knees I picked the testament off the table of the desk, fronting on the right hand side of the outside leaf a passage which looked to me bluer ink and deeper type I read it over and those were the words, 2d Cor. 6:17, "Wherefore come ye out from among them and be ye separate, saith the Lord, and touch not the unclean thing and I will receive you." On reading the passage over I had its interpretation as I have tonight. I thought it was a hard blow and hit me with great force. Nevertheless I remembered that a few moments before I had asked the Lord to show me if there was anything that stood in the way and I would make the sacrifice, and when He did it, it hit me very hard. I then thought if I read a little farther I might find something that might make the passage a little easier and take some of its real force away. As I read the following verse, which was the 18th, "And I will be unto you a father and ye shall be unto me sons and daughters, saith the Lord

I insisted that I was done and went out of the place with the determination never to return. Then I went to my home, being on a Monday afternoon. My children were all around the dining room table and with tears streaming down my face, I tried to tell my dear family what had happened, then and there erected a family altar which has since been a great blessing to my life and family. Men often ask me and write me after I leave towns, what became of my business. After being out a few days, I remembered that there were some legitimate steps I should take and I sent word to some of the people that I had dealt with and owed money

Good Cheer at the Evangelistic Meetings Sunday

The auditorium beside eight walls have been filled and at the First Baptist church last night for every service, and crowds were filled and others who could not find seats were compelled to standing elsewhere.

The evangelist preached three stirring sermons yesterday, one in the morning at the service at 11:00 hour and the morning for persons in the after-noon and again last night. In the morning he spoke on the heavenly life and in the evening appeal to the hearts of the hearers for making the heavenly life their. Soloist Jolly sang at the 11:00 hour and for long and the appeal at his service of song at the evening hour was so strong that there were five or five votes when he had finished. There is a rich experience and tenderness about the singing of "Rastus" Jolly that makes a strong appeal to the human heart. The service for women in the afternoon was well attended by the women of the church and community.

The big rousing service of the day, however, came last evening when the people who wanted to get in could not all be accommodated with seats.

The results of the day were very satisfactory to the members of the church and the evangelistic party, several during the day expressed the purpose to lead the Christian life and to identify themselves with the church. There were two outstanding features at the service last evening, the song both pleasing and touching, disposing of Silvest. Orr was the singing of the Preacher chorus. The chorus is appealing so everybody for there are few people but like very much to hear the singing of the children. The chorus is divided into two choirs and they have some competition, most friendly, as to which shall sing the other. Two little girls were called from one division to the platform by the pastor to sing a duet. This was highly appreciated by the girls or the congregation but was certainly most pleasing to all who heard the song both pleasing and touching, daughter of Jim Tippins of the city water department, and Shirley Curtis, the daughter of John Curtis.

Another touching effect at the meeting very evening feature of last evening was the taking of the offering with the hope of securing the amount of money to finish paying all the local expenses of the campaign.

Hundreds of the leaders passing through the audience and taking the collection, the evangelist asked that those who had wanted to the Lord and deposit their gifts on the altar as did the believers of old. Practically every one present responded and the altar was the whole audience with few exceptions marched to the front and deposited their gifts, where they were left here in charge that had responsibility were provided. Two men were noticed making their escape and evidently they did not want it was because they were broke or afraid to be seen marching in the company of the Lord's people and so left. The crowd as a whole seemed to like the demonstration and entered into the spirit of the meeting with a will and an abundance of good cheer. The offering was quite generous and will more than meet the needs of the people with what had already been contributed.

Tonight at 7:30 Mr. Tyler will speak and at 7:30 Dr. Jobe will conclude the story telling period in the regular school building. The last issue of business will follow the service tonight.

The service will continue on the grounds with meeting every evening at 7:30 o'clock.

Great Crowd at the Evangelistic Meetings Sunday

The capacity house slzid might well have been hung out at the First Baptist church last night for every available seat and chair was filled and others who could not find seats went away to worship elsewhere.

The evangelist preached three strong sermons yesterday, one in the morning at the eleven o'clock hour and at the meeting for women in the afternoon and again last night. In the morning he spoke on the home life and it was a strong appeal to the hearts of the hearer for making the home life ideal. Soloist Jelks seemed to be at his best all day long and the appeal of his message of song at the morning hour was so strong that there were few dry eyes when he had finished. There is a rare sweetness and tenderness about the singing of "Sunshine" Jelks that makes a strong appeal to the human heart. The service for women in the afternoon was well attended by the women of the church and community.

The big rousing service of the day, however, came last evening when the people who wanted to get in could not all be accommodated with seats.

The results of the day were very satisfactory to the members of the church and the evangelistic party. Several during the day expressed the purpose to lead the Christian life and to identify themselves with the church. There were two outstanding features at the service last evening that were both pleasing and made for deepening of interest. One was the singing of the Sunshine chorus. This makes its appeal to everybody for there are few people but like very much to hear the singing of the children. The Sunshine choir is divided into two sections and they have some competition, most friendly, as to which shall outsing the other. Two little girls were called from one division to the platform by the pastor to sing a duet. This was wholly unexpected by the girls or the congregation but was certainly most pleasing to all who listened. The girls were Grace Tippins, daughter of Ben Tippins of the city water department, and Shirley Cartin, the daughter of John Cartin.

Another unique and at the same time very amusing feature of last evening was the taking of the offering with the hope of securing the amount of money to finish paying all the local expenses of the campaign.

Instead of the ushers passing through the audience and taking the collection, the evangelist asked that the people march up to the front and deposit their gifts on the altar as did the Hebrews of old. Processions were formed from the various sections and the whole audience with few exceptions marched to the front and deposited their gifts, where they were cast into a dispan that had thoughtfully been provided. Two men were noticed making their escape and everybody wondered whether it was because they were broke or afraid to be seen marching in the company of so many Christian men and women. The crowd as a whole seemed to like the innovation and entered into the spirit of the offering parade with zest and an abundance of good nature. The offering was quite generous and almost met the necessities of the campaign with what had already been contributed.

Tonight at 7:30 Mr. Thiot will speak and at 7:00 Mr. Jelks will continue the story telling period in the Sunday school building. The ordinance of baptism will follow the service tonight.

The service will continue all the week with meeting every evening at 7:30 o'clock.

MUST SHINE PLEDGE AGAINST THE SHIMMY

(International News Service.)

CHICAGO, Dec. 15—"This is to certify that, during the dance just finished, I saw no shimmying, cheek-to-cheek dancing or any other objectionable feature."

The foregoing pledge hereafter will have to be forthcoming at the end of every sorority dance at Northwestern University, Miss Mary Ross Potter, dean of women, issued the order.

"Every dance," Dean Potter's order reads, "given by a sorority on the campus in the future must be attended by an alumnae of the sorority under whose auspices the affair is held. As chaperon she will sign the written pledge at the end of the dance signifying the absence of objectionable features."

PINNED UNDER BOULDER TRAPPER SAVES HIMSELF

(International News Service.)

WHEATLAND, Wyo., Dec. 15—Walter Murphy, a trapper, dislodged a boulder when he leaped across a brook in Fletcher Park, near here, the large rock breaking his leg and pinning him under its weight.

Murphy labored several hours chipping away pieces of the boulder with his hunter's axe before he succeeded in liberating himself.

With his leg broken he crawled nearly a mile through deep snow and over a rocky trail to his cabin, where he fell exhausted at the door.

Murphy suffered much from exposure but will recover.

[illegible] Deficit of [illegible]

(The Associated Press.)

WASHINGTON, Dec. 15—Operation of the United States postal service for the fiscal year 1920 resulted in a deficit of $17,270,462—the second largest in the history of the service—Postmaster General Burleson shows in his annual report to the president, in which expenditures of the post office department are placed at $454,322,609 and revenues at $437,150,212. The postmaster general charges congress with direct responsibility for the deficit, explaining that the expenditures included approximately $35,302,500 paid as a war bonus to postal employees and stating that but for this there would have been a surplus of $18,427,317. Mr. Burleson says he declined to approve the bonus action of the legislative department, adding that he had offered suggestions of another plan for compensating the employees which would have served the purpose without at the same time giving a basket increase in pay to "thousands who were already amply compensated."

"For reasons than can be readily understood," he continues, "the legislative department rejected these suggestions made by the postmaster general and hence is directly responsible for the deficit which inevitably allowed the indefensible action.

"The postmaster general feels constrained to point out that if a prompt halt is not called and such a policy is persisted in, there will be a deficiency for the next fiscal year of approximately $26,000,000 and the postal establishment will cease to be self-supporting, as it should be, and will become a constantly increasing burden upon the general treasury."

Reference also is made to the decision of the Interstate commerce commission granting the railways additional pay aggregating $3,103,583 for carrying the mails. This served likewise to offset increases in postal receipts, Mr. Burleson declares.

In his discussion of his administration of the postal service, the postmaster general says:

"The present postal administration has been one of continuous and permanent progress and improvement. Nothing has been left undone that was within the authority of the postmaster general to do to effect readjustments in the interests of the people as a whole and not in that of any special class.

"The air mail service, which has been operated successfully since its inauguration May 15, 1918, has been extended across the continent and collaterally and further extension by contract service inaugurated.

"The parcel post service, both domestic and international, has been greatly extended and facilities for handling parcels improved. The foreign countries and colonies now being reached by this service.

"The delivery service has been extended, the established service in all the larger cities materially improved and the government owned motor-vehicle service inaugurated in 1914, has been established in 153 cities.

"The railway mail service has been operated with increased efficiency under the space system, facilities for the handling of mail improved, and the service firmly established upon a scientific basis.

"War conditions have been overcome in the foreign mail service, which has been brought back to normal and is rapidly improving.

"The money order service and postal savings system have rapidly recovered from war conditions and are in most satisfactory operation.

[illegible]

"There has been [illegible] improvement in the [illegible] parcel post [illegible] of handling dead letters.

"A large number of [illegible] improvements have been made in the mail equipment, [illegible] work, adding to the [illegible] the comforts of the employees and at the same time lessening, by efficient methods, the unit cost of production.

"Salaries of employees in all grades have been increased and working conditions and environments improved wherever possible."

Attention is again directed by the postmaster general to the growth of organization among the postal employees and he urges that steps be taken to "curb the malicious and pernicious influence" of these organizations upon the postal personnel. He says they have operated to "interfere to a considerable extent with the efficient conduct" of the service, adding that "much of the so-called 'demoralizing postal service' and 'dissatisfaction' exist only in the minds and imaginations of said agitators of these organizations, who instill and hammer these doctrines into the minds of the employees through the medium of their publications."

Reports from the bedside of F. W. Pope, who is seriously ill with pneumonia, indicate that he is somewhat improved this afternoon, although still far from danger.

REFUSES TO VACATE COUNTY POOR FARM

DeLand News:—Carl H. Kocher has been appointed by the board of county commissioners as keeper of the county poor farm. Kocher went on to take charge this morning, but later reported at the sheriff's office and asked for help, stating that Mrs. Jones had refused to vacate the premises until she had been given a month's notice. The sheriff instructed him to refer his troubles to County Commissioner Hughes, who is in charge of the poor farm.
